

Community Meeting

Below are directions for those of you attending the Quest community meeting this Saturday, January 24. The meeting will take place from 9:30 – 1:00 at the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center in the Prince George's County Suite. The Smith Center is located on the University of Maryland campus across from Byrd Stadium. The easiest way to enter the building is to go to the end of the parking lot that the center and stadium share. As you exit the building turn right and go up the stairs. Across the street you will see an entrance to the Smith Center. Go through those doors. The Prince George's County Suite is the second door on your right immediately after you enter the building. It's across from the vending machines. The Smith Center is a huge complex and entering this side door across from the parking lot is the easiest way to find the room.

Directions to the campus can be found at this address:

<http://www.claricesmithcenter.umd.edu/index.cfm?content=visitors/directions>

It has been encouraging talking to many of you about the meeting and the upcoming special events that we will be planning. If you get lost trying to find the room, you can call Tim's cell phone (301) 524-3849. The reception in the room is not the greatest, but we should get your call. See you Saturday.

Wings Returns

Quest Wings Company is back in rehearsals and classes. Quest Affiliate Artist, Mark Jaster is teaching mime and Eric Malzkuhn will be teaching creative sign language. The company will be working with new members to teach them repertoire and developing a new piece to premier in Vienna, Austria.

Two weeks ago the company showcased at the Association of Performing Arts Presenters Conference in New York City. Thanks to Rachael Barainica, Darren Frazier, Banafsheh Wallace for doing a great job of representing the company. We also want to thank Margie Farmer from Class Acts on Tour for the hard work she did in arranging the showcases and the exhibit booth.