

Lost & Clown'd Showcase

Quest's newest work, Lost & Clown'd featuring Eric Beatty, Willy Conley, and Mark Jaster, will showcase Saturday, December 10 at 8:00 PM at the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center's Kogod Theatre. Towson University Theatre Department Chairman, Jay Herzog is the show's lighting designer and Myra Coffield is the show's stage manager. It has been a joy to workshop the show with this talented ensemble. Lost & Clown' will have its world premier at QuestFest.

Here is a description of this wonderfully engaging piece which is appropriate for all audiences:

The show is over. Or is it? Three members of a circus find themselves in strange surroundings and with yet another audience. What is one to do? Perform, of course! After all, there is an audience. Developed and performed by three accomplished physical performers, Eric Beatty, Willy Conley, and Mark Jaster, each of whom comes to Lost & Clown'd from a variety of stylistic bases, Lost & Clown'd audiences will never look at the "every day" the same way again.

The Clarice Smith Center for the Performing Arts is located on the University of Maryland campus. Click on the link for directions:

<http://claricesmithcenter.umd.edu/2006/c/visitors/directions>

Wings on the Road

Last week, Quest's Wings Company performed at the Riderwood Retirement Community in Beltsville, Maryland. Quest is also working with Riderwood residents and staff to arrangement bus trips to QuestFest.

On December 12, the company will perform at Baltimore's Center Stage.

Russian Visit

If you saw any of the three performances by the Nedoslov Theatre Company last week, you know what a special ensemble this is. They simply awed audiences. It was wonderful to reconnect with old friends Igor Vostrov and Alexander Martyanov.

If you missed the performances, you can see a video of their Kennedy Center show at the link below.

http://www.kennedy-center.org/programs/millennium/artist_detail.cfm?artist_id=NEDOSLOVTC

Board of Directors Meeting

Quest next Board of Directors meeting is at Saturday, December 10 from 9:30 – 1:30 in the Prince George's County Suite at the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center. The general public is welcome to attend.